Ensuring that the next generation of citizens has the geographic skills and knowledge to lead our changing world.

With an annual, tax-deductible donation of $2,500, your business can support the American Geographical Society's (AGS) efforts to be the foremost champion of geography for the benefit of society.

In 2000, AGS Councilor Dr. Alec Murphy led the effort to establish the Advanced Placement (AP) Human Geography course in order to combat the decline of geographic education in the 20th century. More than 20 years later, the AP Human Geography course, which has steadily grown to 250,000+ students annually.

With the explosion in new geospatial technologies and data sources, AGS is committed to delivering high-quality content and resources to educators and students across America, fellowships for teacher development, and scholarships to support graduate student research.

"Being an AGS Teacher Fellow has been the highlight of my year. I have so much to process and create for my students as a result of this experience."
